surprise parties, somehow, nearly always turn out unpleasantly. They tell about one that came off up in Connecticut recently which was not helf as involve me it should have been. It A SURPRISING SURPRISE PARTY.-Those not half as joyous as it should have been. It was reported of a man and his wife, who had been married many years without having any children, that they had at last been made happy by the birth of a daughter. Some of their friends determined to give the man a presenta tion surprise party. So about forty persons marched up to the house one evening, carrying a cradle and lots of gum-rings, and bibs, and bottles with gum nozzles, and a baby earriage and some little nightgowns and socks and paragoric. And they all burst into the parlor at once on tiptoe. And when the man, in amazement, asked them what they meant by such conduct, they said they were coming in quietly so as not to wake the baby. And when the husband blushed and stammered, and asked, "What baby?" they said his baby, and began to hand him the things, and to load him up with soothing syrup and gum-rings, until he floored one of the guests with a quart bottle of Paragoric, and held him down until be explained. And then it was revealed that it was all a mistake about the little daughter; that for Washing Dishes and Glassware is invaluno such arrival had taken place at all, but that able. Cheaper than Soap. the report was false.' And then the surprise party was a great deal more suprised than the man was; and the guests gathered up that in-fant furniture and tried to pretend to the man that they never thought he had a daughter. that they never thought he had a daughter, but that they understood he had accepted a position as a director of an orphan asylum, and that they brought around a few things for him to distribute among the poor, fatherless children. The man said it was singularly thin, and then the company went home. The Constitutional Convention ought to adopt some kind of a measure to prevent these mistakes.

Like Regulars on Dress Parade The teeth should always be scrupulously clean and free from blemish. Keep them in this condition with the incomparable SOZODONT, and when they are veterans in the service they will still be as "good as new." jy 21-eolw jy 21-eolw
